

Should we have a slack.com site for CAO Modelling and Synthesis, as a way to coordinate without long conference calls?

The screenshot shows a Slack interface for a workspace named 'Banas lab'. The left sidebar lists various channels, with '#notebk-phyto-arctic' highlighted. The main channel view shows a message from Tuesday, March 6th, featuring a map of the Arctic region with a text overlay that reads: 'easy to share figures, documents, and code snippets inline with the discussion'. Below the map, there is a message from Trevor Slougher asking for spreadsheets, and a response from neil banas. The right sidebar shows channel details, including 6 members and options to invite more people or view shared files.

chat channels for individual projects + general topics easy to share figures, documents, and code snippets inline with the discussion

If you might use this (or want to suggest an alternative), email neil.banas@strath.ac.uk